

Dispatch from Thursday, 3 May 2007

Greetings:

Today was probably our last survey for crabeater seals. We didn't see any, but we did find a group of Antarctic Terns resting on the ice. Coming back into Palmer station was took a lot of time as we had to work through a lot of heavy ice. In a Zodiac this is slow going.

The pictures today were taken by Mike Goebel and the boat driver is Mike Goebel.

Best from the seal team.
